TEAMSTERS NEWS RELEASE

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

SEPTEMBER 10, 1986

FOR MORE INFORMATION

DUKE ZELLER (202) 624-6911

WASHINGTON, D.C.-- Teamsters General President Jackie Presser announced today that another milestone in the IBT's national retiree housing program is being reached in Janesville, Wisconsin. Groundbreaking for a 50-unit, retiree housing complex, sponsored by Teamsters Local Union 579 in Janesville and the Teamsters Retiree Housing Corporation, takes place today on property adjacent to the local union.

General President Presser and Teamsters General Secretary-Treasurer Weldon Mathis join Local 579's Secretary-Treasurer, Brendan F. Kaiser, and other Wisconsin VIPs in celebrating the groundbreaking today at 11:00am Central Daylight Time.

The IBT's sponsorship of retiree housing began in Ohio. These housing ventures have spread nationwide since Presser became General President in 1983. Because retiree housing has been one of the Union's foremost priorities, it is with considerable pride and satisfaction that the General President has announced this major undertaking in Wisconsin.

Local 579, which represents 1,500 Teamsters in Rock, Walworth, Green, and Lafayette Counties, donated the 2.7 acre tract of land for the complex. Kaiser and John J. Joyce, National Director of the Teamsters Retiree Housing Corporation, have spent countless hours bringing the housing complex from the dream stage to reality. Kaiser has won support and praise from the Janesville area as well as from the state capitol in Madison. Kaiser commented, "Teamsters are people helping people, and this is a good way to do something for the community, regardless of affiliation."

Teamster retiree housing is open to all qualified individuals as well as to Teamster retirees, and "Section 8" federal rent subsidies are available to all eligible residents.

The three-story, brick building will contain 32 apartments of 516 square feet, each; 12 efficiency apartments with 397 square feet; five one-bedroon, handicapped-equipped apartments of 538 square feet; and one apartment for the building custodian. In addition, the complex will feature an elevator, community room, community kitchen, postal service, a laundry area, and 24-hour security. Plans call for an on-site medical service eventually.

The Teamsters Union is committed to these housing ventures and plans to get five or six underway every year across the nation to be sponsored and supported by Teamster affiliates.

Statements by Presser requested

By JOHN GRIFFITH
STAFF WRITER

Federal prosecutors may give defense lawyers statements that were made by Teamsters President Jackie Presser and a co-defendant to government agents, according to documents filed in federal court here yesterday.

Government lawyers said federal rules allowed them to turn over such statements only to the defendant who made them. The prosecutors did not admit having those statements but agreed to turn them over "if they exist."

Stephen H. Jigger and Bernard A. Smith, lawyers with the U.S. Justice Department's Organized Crime Strike Force, filed a 71-page document responding to defense lawyers' requests for a broad range of information concerning racketeering and embezzlement charges against Presser, Anthony Hughes and Harold Friedman. They are accused of participating in a payroll-padding scheme at Teamsters union Local 507 here but have denied any wrongdoing.

Lawyers for Presser and Hughes had requested all statements made by their clients to government agents.

A Justice Department policy forbids confirming or denying informant status.

Concerning requests by Presser and Hughes for all files in their names held by numerous government agencies including the FBI and IRS, the government would neither confirm nor deny those files exist.

Prosecutors turned down numerous defense requests, including one for documents concerning an earlier investigation of Presser that was closed by the Justice Department in 1982.

Presser had been under investigation for allegedly receiving kickbacks from the Hoover-Gorin public relations firm, which had a $1.3 million, three-year contract with the Teamsters.

"The Hoover-Gorin investigation and the present investigation involved entirely distinct allegations of criminality on the part of defendant Presser," Strike Force lawyers claimed.

Strike Force lawyers also turned down a defense request for FBI internal guidelines concerning informants and authorization of informants to commit criminal acts.

A Justice Department policy forbids confirming informant status.

In a separate filing, prosecutors indicated they would turn over documents concerning a separate investigation of former Cleveland FBI agent Robert S. Friedrick but asked U.S. District Judge George W. White to order defense lawyers not to discuss the contents or make them public "to avoid public disclosure of evidence or other matters relevant to another criminal case."

Friedrick was indicted by a federal grand jury in Washington, D.C., in May on charges of making false statements to investigators to avert Presser's indictment. A Dec. 2 trial is scheduled.

White is expected to conduct hearings on disagreements over what information the government should or should not turn over to defense lawyers.

In another development, lawyers for Friedman yesterday filed a request for government documents and claimed they would prove the indictment was issued "because the government sought to a) 'save face' or b) retaliate against him and co-defendants for the criticisms levied against the government about the underlying investigation."

An earlier payroll-padding investigation ended in June 1985 without any indictments after Justice Department officials concluded Presser had FBI authorization for the scheme. Investigations were reopened in Cleveland and in Washington, D.C., when investigators questioned whether Presser had such FBI authorization.

Friedman's lawyers claim if Presser did have unwritten, but lawful authorization for the scheme, none of the defendants can be held criminally culpable.

They requested all government documents concerning the alleged authorization and documents concerning the use of any of the defendants or alleged named and unnamed co-conspirators as informants.

THE 50 BIGGEST MAFIA BOSSES

Meet the men who manage a $50-billion-a-year business that reaches into almost every U.S. city. They face familiar problems: aging leadership, less dedicated younger employees, increased foreign competition. And now the feds are trying to wreck their profit centers. ■ by Roy Rowan

CRIME PAYS. Annual gross income from the rackets will probably exceed $50 billion this year. That makes the mob's business greater than all U.S. iron, steel, copper, and aluminum manufacturing combined, or about 1.1% of GNP. These figures, compiled for the President's Commission on Organized Crime, include only revenues from traditional mob businesses, such as narcotics, loan-sharking, illegal gambling, and prostitution. They do not include billions more brought in from the mob's diversification into such legitimate enterprises as entertainment, construction, trucking, and food and liquor wholesaling.

The industry that runs this huge part of the economy comprises crime families, not companies. Wharton Econometric Forecasting Asssociates, in a study prepared for the President's Crime Commission, found that the mob's hold on the economy stifles competition and siphons off capital, resulting in a loss of some 400,000 jobs, an increase in consumer prices of 0.3%, a reduction in total output of $18 billion, and a decrease in per capita disposable income of $77 a year. Since organized-crime members cheat on taxes, the rest of the population will pay an estimated $6.5 billion more to the Internal Revenue Service this year.

The organization chart of a crime family or syndicate mirrors the management structure of a corporation. At the top of the pyramid is a boss, or chief executive. Below him are an underboss (chief operating officer) and a consigliere (general counsel). Then follow ranks of capos (vice presidents) and soldiers (lower-level employees who carry out the bosses' orders). Like corporations, crime groups often rely on outside consultants (see box, page 34).

For this story FORTUNE interviewed FBI agents, leaders of federal organized-crime strike forces, and local law enforcement officials across the U.S. On their assessment of the wealth, power, and influence of the crime bosses, FORTUNE has ranked them from 1 to 50 on the facing page.

In spite of its clout, organized crime is an industry in crisis. The leadership is old, and the next generation of managers seems to lack spirit, dedication, and discipline. "Today you got guys in here who never broke an egg," a New Jersey Mafia leader complained in a conversation bugged by the FBI. Another reported that a disrespectful underling had addressed him by his nickname. The FBI says that the Mafia membership is shrinking. To bolster the lower ranks, the bosses have been recruiting tough young trainees from Sicily, called "Greenies."

The Mafia, the largest and best-established crime organization, is up against forceful new competition from Asian and Latin American underworld groups that specialize in heroin, cocaine, and marijuana (see box, page 38). These drug smugglers and dealers not only have destroyed the monopoly that the mob once had but also have put some Mafia veterans in the uncomfortably subservient role of acting as their distributors.

The most serious challenge comes from federal law enforcement officials, who are now effectively using the 16-year-old Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations (RICO) statute to prosecute mobsters. G. Robert Blakey, the Notre Dame law professor who drafted the 1970 law, says that it usually takes prosecutors some time to recognize the force of new legislation.

Recent indictments under the RICO statutes have brought about half the 50 most important crime members to trial, including No. 1, Tony Salerno, godfather of the Genoveses, the strongest Mafia family. Salerno is a defendant in the so-called Commission trial in New York. The government is trying to convict him and six other members of the Mafia's national ruling council, the Commission, of being part of a racketeering enterprise. Most of the accused sit stone-faced and silent in the courtroom. But Carmine Persico (No. 6), the basset-eyed boss of Colombo family, is acting as his own law

Pressure from law enforcement agenci is forcing the mob to change some of its n agement techniques. Members of the C mission used to gather in large ceremo "sitdowns" to settle their business p lems. The FBI's extensive use of wire and electronic bugs have made sitdo prime surveillance targets, and these m ings have become less frequent affairs. Mafia leaders are even reducing busi lunches and dinner their old public h outs. Wherever p ble, bosses use cou to pass along t orders.

tinue. Bosses behind bars are not powerless. Their "access to telephones is virtually unlimited," assistant FBI director Oliver Revell told a Senate committee in 1983. The late Nick Civella, he pointed out, "was running the Kansas City mob from federal prison." If the Commission members' prison terms are long or if they die in jail, new leaders will rise in each family to take their place. Their replacements, whose names appear below them on the top 50 list, may turn out tougher still.

The culture of organized crime—based on greed, tenacity, and discipline—remains strong. Mob members call each other "wise guys," and so-called wise-guy rules define a strict code of conduct. For one thing, a member who vouches for someone who ultimately betrays the organization takes the hit—usually before reprisals against the stool pigeon. For another, if a fixer takes a mob payoff, he must produce precisely what he promises. No excuses or refunds are accepted.

The crime industry is organized geographically. Though the mob's grasp reaches most major cities—Seattle is an exception—two-thirds of the Mafia's membership is concentrated in New York and Chicago. The Commission adjudicates territorial disputes, settles business conflicts, and even passes on execution sentences.

Five sometimes-warring Mafia families control New York City—the Genoveses, Gambinos, Luccheses, Bonannos, and Colombos. Induction into these families involves a swearing-in ritual that calls for the taking of a secret oath and the giving of a drop of blood. In Chicago a single Mafia organization called the Outfit runs matters with less friction. There the initiation rite is consummated like a business deal, with a handshake. The Outfit also influences mob activities in Milwaukee, Kansas City, Phoenix, Las Vegas, and Los Angeles.

According to the FBI there are only about 1,700 sworn, or "made," Mafia members.

JIM CUMMINS—NEWSDAY

NO. 18 MICHAEL FRANZESE, the jailed Colombo capo, is a second-generation mobster. His father is a convicted bank robber.

For each member, the government figures there are ten "associates." Wharton Econometric Forecasting Associates estimates that the average annual income for an individual organized-crime member was about $222,000 between 1979 and 1981. Of course, the haul for the top 50 crime bosses would be much higher. The forecasters used data from the FBI as well as income statistics from the IRS—gross income from tax returns and average unreported income from criminal and civil cases. Wharton also estimated that associates made an annual average of $61,0 over that period. Associates advance to f membership in the organization by loya carrying out orders and by being willing kill. According to the Wharton study, so 265,000 people are employed in business run, at least in part, by organized crime.

Underworld leaders often reinvest th swag, kickback money, or bribes in legitim enterprises. Such diversification is less ri than expanding an illegal operation. Furth more, benign business can camouflage m criminal activity and reduce the danger prosecution for income tax evasion.

In doing business with law-abiding com nies, mob leaders have learned to cash in their notorious reputation without automa cally resorting to violence. Fraud and inti dation are their favorite tactics. Says Ste J. Twist, chief assistant attorney gene Arizona: "The dangerous thing about nized crime today is it has become legitimate."

REPORTER ASSOCIATE Andrew Kupfer

A common racketeer strategy is to control a union so that it willingly signs cut-rate "sweetheart" contracts with mob-run companies and threatens to strike competitors. Underworld leaders have used unions to influence and infiltrate many legitimate businesses, from warehouses to nightclubs. Wharton forecasters figure that the involvement of organized crime tends to push prices up between 0.5% and 2% in these and related industries, such as food and liquor distribution.

A corrupt union is a profit center. It offers almost unlimited opportunities for extortion through the use of "ghosts" (fictitious workers) and "no-shows" (employees who do not come to work) and the threat of slowdowns. Mob-controlled unions and labor-leasing companies supply security guards for nuclear power plants, garbage collectors for most New York City office buildings, and truck drivers for Shell Oil, Coca-Cola, and International Paper, among many others. "A union can be used instead of a gun or a baseball bat," says Edward McDonald, chief of the Organized Crime Strike Force in Brooklyn.

ANTHONY SALERNO, 75, whose name appears first among the top 50, heads an underworld conglomerate with enterprises on both sides of what for him, at least, is an indistinct line separating illegal from legitimate business. Known as "Fat Tony" ("Too fat to flee," chide his underworld cronies), he presently resides at the Metropolitan Correctional Center in Manhattan, next door to the U.S. Southern District Court, where he and other alleged Commission members are on trial.

Salerno's power does not stem solely from his position as head of the 300-member-strong Genovese family. Even before he became boss in 1980, Salerno made more money than most Mafia chieftains, mainly by skimming from casinos in Nevada and the Caribbean. Skimming is taking cash off the top of gambling proceeds before they are reported as taxable revenues. Law-abiding casinos take pains to prevent skimming; in mob-controlled casinos the practice is encouraged and widespread. The easiest way to skim is to simply walk into the counting room and take the money, a casino operator was overheard by the FBI to say. A recent indictment charges Salerno and his cohorts with operating a number of illegal gambling joints for betting on numbers and sports. In addition, they "extortionate extend credit-

ing. Salerno is accused of using "threats and beatings to force victims to pay illegal interest and to repay loans."

Crime boss No.1 also has thriving business interests in New York City's construction industry. According to Justice Department disclosures in the Commission case and in another racketeering indictment, between 1981 and 1985, Salerno and his colleagues imposed a 2% Mafia tax on New York City contractors pouring concrete for all superstructures costing more than $2 million. They ran a cartel that rigged bids for supplying the concrete. The cartel decided in advance which company would submit the winning bid. Other companies were forced to put in bids that were unacceptably high. The 2% tax alone produced $3.5 million in profits for the Mafia on the 72 construction jobs the government investigated. That's only a fraction of the buildings that have gone up in New York's recent real estate boom, for which the mob supplied concrete. One witness told the President's Crime Commission that the mob has inflated Manhattan construction costs by as much as 20%.

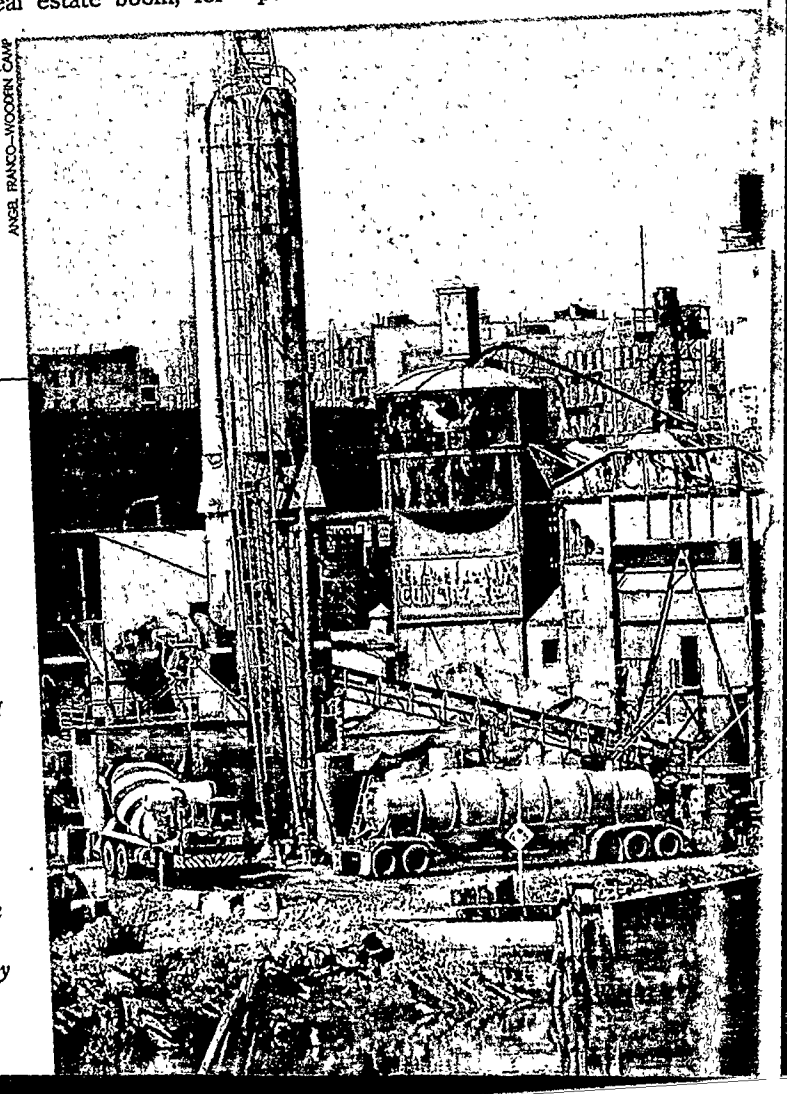
Salerno, according to the indictment, "is a hidden partner" in a covey of companies that bid on the concrete construction work. Together they have won contracts worth more than $71 million from ten big construction jobs, including Trump Plaza, a luxury apartment building on Manhattan's East Side.

The government charges that bidding on these projects was further rigged in favor of Salerno's companies through collusion with two ready-mix firms: Certified Concrete Co. and Transit-Mix Concrete Corp. Both are owned by Edward J. "Biff" Halloran, who is better known for the midtown hotel Halloran House, which he once owned. He denies any collusion.

Any contractor who dared bid against the mob cartel faced a cutoff of ready-mix or problems with its delivery. The federal indictment charges that Salerno also holds sway over Teamsters Local 282, whose members drive concrete delivery trucks. A punishment for recalcitrant contractors: delays and other, more serious labor problems.

CONCRETE AS A MOB WEAPON

Organized crime, the government charges, carried out bid-rigging schemes on the construction of at least 16 Manhattan skyscrapers, including the apartment buildings at far right, by threatening to cut off delivery of concrete from this and other plants. Investigators estimate that such collusion inflates New York City construction costs by as much as 20%.



ANGEL FRANCO—WOODFIN CAMP

Salerno's hand in union affairs reaches right to the top. The Justice Department charges that it was he who "selected" Roy Williams to lead the International Brotherhood of Teamsters in 1981 and then ordered union officials to elect him president. Williams was imprisoned for conspiring in 1979 to bribe Howard Cannon, then a U.S. Senator from Nevada. Even so, federal prosecutors say that Salerno continues to hold "effective control" of the union under the current president, Jackie Presser.

Tony and his wife, Margaret, often relaxed at their estate in Rhinebeck, New York. For the five years that ended last December, they were a two-income family. The government charges that Marathon Enterprises, a New Jersey food-processing company, paid Margaret "brokerage fees" on sales of hot dogs and other delicatessen foods to supermarkets, sports arenas, and street vendors. She received these payments even on sales to such reputable companies as Chock Full O' Nuts (restaurants), Pathmark (supermarkets), and Canteen Corp. (vending machines). The Justice Department claims that Genovese soldiers arranged the kickbacks by threatening Marathon with "force, violence, and fear of economic loss."

For all his wealth and power, Salerno operated modestly before being arrested. His office was not in one of the gleaming midtown Manhattan towers whose construction costs he had driven up, but in the Palma Boy Social Club, in a storefront in teeming East Harlem. For a long time Salerno attended to business at the Palma or puttered around his Rhinebeck estate without encountering much trouble from the feds. His principal worry was his weight, and he spent weeks at fat farms trying to slim down. The plump times ended after the FBI planted a bug in the Palma Boy Club, which produced much of the evidence for the racketeering charges Salerno now faces. Even if he is convicted and sent to prison, Salerno will probably continue his unchallenged control of the Genovese family.

CHICAGO'S BOSS, Anthony Accardo, 80, boasts that he has never spent a night in jail. Like many a chief executive lately, he was called back from retirement (at the Indian Wells club near Palm Springs, California) when the organization he had long headed faced a sudden management crisis: The leadership of the Chicago Outfit was packed off to jail early this year. Accardo's renewed position raises him to No. 2 on the list.

Accardo is reputed to have been a machine-gunner for Al Capone, and he is called "Joe Batters" by his Mafia cronies because of the baseball bat he formerly used for persuasion. He has always been a master of strategic planning. His formidable Outfit is a racketeering combine that runs everything from diaper services to funeral parlors; its efficiency is envied throughout the Mafia. Accardo was the architect of the intricate power plays that made the Outfit the dominant force in the rackets from the Great Lakes to the Pacific over the past decade. Now, with a cadre of couriers winging back and forth from Chicago to California, he functions as the chairman of the board. His operations chief in Chicago is Joseph Ferriola, 59, a disciplined underboss who survived heart bypass surgery last year and is No. 20 on the list. Ferriola's organizational skills are well known. In the Seventies he muscled back into the fold the bookies in Chicago who had tried to be independent.

Discipline is the Outfit's guiding management principle. The Chicago mob imposes a "street tax" on all illegal activities and on some legitimate ones as well. Bookies, hookers, narcotics peddlers, even owners of bars, restaurants, and parking lots pay from 10% to 50% of their gross revenues, depending on the profitability of their operations and the amount of protection required to keep them running. Another city with a street tax is Philadelphia. But organized-crime leaders there have not been very effective in collecting it—not even after the so-called Docile Don, Angelo Bruno, was murdered in 1980 and replaced by the violence-prone Nicodemo Scarfo (No. 43) in a prolonged 18-death gang war in the City of Brotherly Love.

The Outfit maintains especially tight discipline over its internal security. Chicago insurance executive Allen Dorfman, a sophisticated money manager, pioneered the use of union welfare and pension funds to finance an underworld bank in the 1960s. First he funneled loans from the Teamsters' Central States pension fund to several casino-hotels in Las Vegas. Then he showed Accardo and associates how to establish health care organizations in which participating doctors and dentists gave the Outfit kickbacks after overcharging union patients. Dorfman, who personally received kickbacks for processing the Teamster loans and insurance claims, knew too much about the Outfit's finances. He was gunned down in a suburban Chicago parking lot in 1983.

Beginning in 1970 strongman Anthony Spilotro was stationed in Las Vegas to monitor casino skimming and to see that the money flowed smoothly back to his bosses in Chicago. Known as "Tony the Ant" because of his squat, close-to-the-ground appearance, he did not keep an appropriately low business profile, operating out of a Las Vegas hamburger joint called the Food Factory.

Trump Plaza: $7.8 million in concrete

BRIAN ROSE (2)

The Columbia: a $10.4-million contract

From there he dabbled in real estate and set up sidelines to control burglary, fencing, and prostitution on the Strip.

But Spilotro failed to keep the skimming operation well disciplined. Some of the men he supposedly controlled turned up as government witnesses, resulting in the January conviction of Chicago's former ruling duo, Joseph Aiuppa (No. 21) and John Philip "Jackie" Cerone (No. 30). Imprisoned with them were seven other gang leaders, including Carl DeLuna (No. 33), the Kansas City mob's comptroller, whose meticulously kept financial records were uncovered by the FBI (see facing page).

Last June, Tony Spilotro and his brother Mike were found buried in an Indiana cornfield. Investigations suggested they had been garroted and may have been buried alive. In any case, they were victims of wise-guy rules: They had not prevented the guys from spilling the beans, so they suffered the consequences. "There's no way Spilotro could have been killed without Accardo's approval," says Patrick Healy, executive director of the Chicago Crime Commission.

Spilotro's execution may lead to the disintegration of an important peace-keeping pact, hatched by Accardo in 1977, that ceded authority in Las Vegas to the Outfit in Chicago and gave Atlantic City to New York Mafia families. Former FBI agent William Roemer, who spent 23 years tailing Accardo and his cohorts and now is a consultant to the Chicago Crime Commission, says the deal had a grandfather clause. "According to the 1977 agreement, the Eastern mob could keep what it had in Las Vegas, but it couldn't start anything new. Spilotro was there to enforce the edict."

In the confused aftermath of Spilotro's death, competition from New York is challenging the Outfit's hegemony in Las Vegas. Federal and state authorities as well as the Las Vegas police have detected a resurgence of Eastern mob activity, particularly by the Genoveses. "The Outfit's beat up real bad," says an undercover cop. "Not just in Chicago, but here in Las Vegas. The New York guys are taking advantage of it."

Police say that Vincent "Chin" Gigante (No. 19), a Genovese capo, is seizing much of the power previously held by the Outfit and dispensed through Spilotro. Gigante is gigantic, a hulking former boxer who fits the Genovese rough-and-tumble style. He serves on what amounts to the Genoveses' three-man executive committee, Tony Salerno and Louis Manna (No. 38

The aftershock of Spilotro's assassin and the vacuum it has left in Las Vegas hurt the Outfit's reputation on the Coast. Other mobsters have taken to c its California operatives the "Mickey M Mafia." This doesn't bode well for Coast boss Peter Milano (No. 46), wl supported by Accardo in Los Angeles. V a franchise operated by the Outfit turns s it can prove terminal for any field represe tive connected with it. What is happening the West Coast may be a mild precurso things to come in Chicago. The aged Acca has heart disease, and when he dies the C fit may find itself in turmoil.

AMONG THE MAFIA'S aging ex utives a true yuppie has emerg Michael Franzese (No. 18), the of convicted bank robber and lombo chieftain John "Sonny" Franzese, fast-talking 35-year-old businessman handsome father of five. He put togeth cartel that produced feature movies (incl ing the horror film Mausoleum and a yo gang musical called Knights of the City), r discothèque, sold and repaired automob operated construction firms, and achiev near monopoly of independent gasoline s on Long Island. Mike seemed to striv shed the reputation of his father, telling press last year: "Absolutely, I know pe that my father associated with. That does mean I have to do business with them. have to be part of any type life they're leged to be in. It's all nonsense."

A 28-count, 99-page federal indictm tells another story. The government accu young Franzese of ripping off more than million in tax fraud, insurance fraud, frau lent loans, and the fraudulent operation two auto dealerships. The victims of his sales scam included General Motors, Ma Motors of America, and Beneficial Comn cial Corp. Investigations also reveal that cheated New York, New Jersey, and Flor out of hundreds of millions in gasoline taxe

The gas tax scam was accomplish through what federal prosecutor Jerry Bernstein calls a "daisy chain of phony co panies." Some 20 Franzese oil and gas di tributors would make paper sales of gasoli from one company to another until the wh tax bill was owed by one firm known as "burnout company." It consisted only o mailing address, a telephone, and a corpor principal who was an illegal alien. The bu out company, in turn, sold the gas to retail

A skimming citadel, the Stardust is one of the Las Vegas casinos where cash was diverted from counting rooms to the mob.

THE BOOKKEEPER WHO DID HIS JOB TOO WELL

■ As underboss and comptroller of the Kansas City mob, Carl DeLuna felt immense concern for his fiduciary responsibilities. "Toughy," as he is known, called his meticulous record keeping "doin' the right thing." It proved much too right. In January his handwritten documentation of how cash was skimmed from the Tropicana and Stardust casinos in Las Vegas sent nine gangsters to jail, including DeLuna.

The ledgers revealed that between 1976 and 1979, the mob extracted $2.3 million from the two casinos' counting rooms before taxable revenues had been declared. In an October 1977 entry, DeLuna recorded the sitdown in Chicago at which top mob executives determined how the skimming operation would work. The notes proved DeLuna as reliable a recording secretary as he was a bookkeeper. Until the documents were uncovered, federal authorities never suspected that a mobster would keep a record of so important a conclave.

The crime bosses who convened in Chicago agreed that couriers—one DeLuna code-named "Deerhunter" and another, a Chicago policeman he called "Stompy"—would deliver the loot each month to the families in Kansas City, Milwaukee, Chicago, and Cleveland. Distribution of the cash was done the same way corporations declare dividends. The mob bosses and underbosses in the four cities held shares, or "points," in the Stardust and Tropicana; they received a certain amount for each share.

Sometimes the shareholders received extra dividends: DeLuna's ledger shows that skimming produced a $130,000 bonus in January 1979 that he called a "surprise number." The next regular dividend, however, failed to materialize. DeLuna recorded the reason: A key skimmer got sick.

FBI agent William N. Ouseley, who found the books hidden in the basement, attic, and ventilating ducts of DeLuna's house, had no trouble cracking the code that camouflaged the various entries. No. 22, for example, stood for Chicago boss Joe Aiuppa. No. 21 was Aiuppa's enforcer, Jackie Cerone. The nicknames "Fancypants" or "Beerman" applied to Frank Balistrieri, the Milwaukee boss. "ON" (for onorevole, meaning honorable in Italian) was Nick Civella, the Kansas City Mafia chief and DeLuna's boss.

DELUNA'S UNLUCKY LEDGERS

The code above itemizes $1,330 in expenses for DeLuna's 1978 trip to Las Vegas to force mob front man Allen Glick ("Genius") to sell his two casinos. "In" and "out" represent round-trip airfare. "Stanz" stands for room in Italian.

BO RADER-KANSAS CITY TIMES

DeLuna was a cautious accountant. If he did not actually see the money change hands, he said so to distance himself from any defalcations.

He embarked on an important mission in 1978. His assignment: to force Allen R. Glick ("Genius"), the licensed owner of the Stardust and another casino-hotel, the Fremont, to sell out or risk the murder of his two children. The mob, which had begun to distrust Glick, thought it could skim more under another owner. In Las Vegas, DeLuna met first with three members of the Mafia's skimming team: Carl Thomas ("CT" in the ledger page below), a gambling boss at the Tropicana; Joe Agosto ("Ceaser"), casino manager at the Tropicana; and Frank "Lefty" Rosenthal ("Craze"), the mob's man at the Stardust. Next he met Glick, who two days later announced his casinos were for sale.

Four days after DeLuna left for Las Vegas, his wife, Sandy ("San"), followed for the weekend. True to form, DeLuna's accounts show that he paid "personally for San's fare out and in and also for any personal purchases." As one of DeLuna's cronies confided to the FBI, "He kept track of who got what, just so if anybody asked, he could show everything was right, that he hadn't grabbed a dime of that money for himself."

The carefully kept records were only partially responsible for the jailing of Chicago's then Mafia leaders, Aiuppa and Cerone. The testimony provided by Glick, who told about the threats the mob used to force him to unload his casinos, also helped. So did the mob's avarice. The Chicagoans might never have turned up in DeLuna's ledgers if they had not tried to make the most of their role as conciliators. They tried to mediate between the bosses in Kansas City, Milwaukee, and Cleveland who got to squabbling over the casino spoils in 1975. For their efforts the Chicago mob demanded a 25% fee.

DeLuna's books depict Mafia benevolence toward both the greedy and the needy. In 1979, $1,500 went to then Kansas City Teamster chief Roy Williams, code-named "Rancher," who used his influence to help arrange Teamster loans to the mob-controlled casino-hotels. The skimming money also supported a welfare program. DeLuna once noted that after he, Civella, and the others divided some $30,000, smaller amounts ranging from $1,000 to $3,000 were handed out to elderly Mafiosi and to the families of imprisoned mobsters.

The Mardi Gras, a girlie bar in Manhattan, was one of many businesses operated by Genovese capo Matthew Ianniello, No. 35.

with an invoice marked "all taxes paid." Then the burnout company would declare bankruptcy, and Franzese would create another daisy chain.

In spite of his clean-cut image, Mike Franzese inherited his father's business tactics and violent ways. According to Bernstein, one of his goons broke the head of a competitor with a ball peen hammer. And an auditor who questioned Franzese's books was threatened by a Franzese associate: "You don't know who you're bleeping with. We'll cut your heart out." Franzese told a friend who could implicate him in the gasoline tax scam that the man's son would be murdered if he didn't vanish beyond the reach of U.S. courts. The man fled to Panama. Four months later he returned in federal custody to testify against Franzese.

In March, Franzese agreed to plead guilty to racketeering and conspiracy charges, accept a prison term of ten years, forfeit assets worth $4.8 million, and pay an additional $10 million to the states defrauded in the gasoline tax scam. He was able to persuade the Justice Department that he couldn't possibly come up with the $14.8 million if he was stuck behind bars—not even after selling his various houses and signing over his movie rights. An extraordinary deal was struck. Before going to prison, Franzese was permitted limited freedom under the guard of deputy U.S. marshals. The surveillance costs were to be paid by Franzese, who was soon seen (and to the embarrassment of the government, filmed by an NBC-TV news crew) scurrying around Hollywood with his posse in tow. The farce ended when Franzese, reverting to form, gave a bad check to the U.S. Marshals Service to pay for his guards. A federal judge sent him off to prison.

The investigation of Franzese's affairs revealed yet another crooked business—the 700-member Allied International Union, a large labor union of private security guards. Its members worked in sensitive spots as diverse as nuclear power plants and gambling casinos. Allied International had been a joint venture of the Genoveses, Gambinos, and Colombos. But when the Genovese and Gambino partners died, it became exclusively a Colombo operation.

Before Allied International came under Franzese's wing, Daniel Cunningham, a builder in Smithtown, Long Island, thought he had bought control of the union from one of the Genoveses for $90,000. Cunningham saw a way to get rich. He took $134,000 a year in salary and expenses and put his wife, ex-wife, and girlfriend on the union payroll. Cunningham admitted trying to call a guard strike against five nuclear power plants along the Eastern Seaboard, including Three Mile Island, and threatening to strike the Atlantic City casinos. He was indicted for embezzlement, racketeering, and bribery in 1981.

Testifying last year before the President's Commission on Organized Crime, Cunningham explained that when he attempted to sell control of the union to Mike Franzese after going to jail, the latter responded: "Why should I buy something I already own?" Cunningham reported that he was replaced by one of Franzese's sidekicks, who promptly shifted the union's pension fund to a Virgin Islands insurance company that granted Franzese a home mortgage free not only of interest but of principal payments as well.

GARBAGE COLLECTION, which depends on union control, has been a favorite Mafia target. Mob leaders tried unsuccessfully to infiltrate this business in Chicago, Des Moines, and other cities, but succeeded in the New York area, where municipal governments provide garbage pickup just for houses and apartments. Restaurants, hotels, nightclubs, even the United Nations do not get the city's Sanitation Department services; private companies, called carters, do the job. The carters allocate customers among themselves, buying and selling client businesses for from $2,000 to $2 million each. What the carters are buying is the right to overcharge.

Peter Reuter, senior economist with Rand Corp., figures that the allocation scheme inflates private garbage collection prices from 35% to 65% in New York. The harder prosecutors pursue the racketeers, the more notorious the garbage business becomes and the less attractive the business is to legitimate competitors. Says Reuter: "That is the value of a bad reputation."

The only competition is among Mafia families vying for the business. On Long Island the Luccheses and the Gambinos struck a deal to split garbage collection payoffs from various carters. Anthony Corallo (No. 3), the Lucchese boss who is standing trial with Tony Salerno, controlled the employers' group, Private Sanitation Industries Associates Inc. James Failla (No. 36), a Gambino capo, held sway over the garbage truck drivers as overseer of Teamsters Local 813. Every three months Corallo had to pay Failla $50,000 for his cooperation.

Corallo, called "Tony Ducks" because of his previous success in ducking subpoenas, and Salvatore Avellino, his chauffeur-enforcer, thought the best way to eliminate payments to Failla was to start a rival Teamsters local. Through a bug planted behind the dashboard of Avellino's Jaguar, the New York State Organized Crime Task Force overheard him telling a friend how such a rival union could be organized and used: "Let's take a son-in-law, somebody, put them into the [union] office; they got a job. Let's take somebody's daughter, whatever, she's the secretary. Let's staff it with our people." Then, so his listener fully understood how

THE MOB'S OUTSIDE CONSULTANTS

■ Consultants are almost as popular with organized crime families as they are with corporations. These special counsellors —lawyers, labor experts, and political advisers—shuttle between members of the mob and moviemakers, hotel and casino operators, owners of professional sports franchises, corporate chief executives, and public officeholders. They claim to be aboveboard with nothing to hide. But when forced to testify under oath about their underworld connections, they usually become vague.

Chicago lawyer Sidney R. Korshak has represented Hilton Hotels Corp., the Los Angeles Dodgers, and numerous other corporations. Nevertheless, former FBI agent William Roemer describes Korshak as "the most important link between organized crime and legitimate business." He has a marvelous ability to help his clients settle labor difficulties.

Korshak has always been careful to conceal his organized-crime connections. Investigators learned, however, that in 1958 he helped Tony Accardo draw up a contract that paid the Chicago mob boss $65,000 a year as an employee of a wholesaler called Premium Beer Sales. An FBI bug planted in a mob hangout revealed that Korshak used the code name "Mr. Lincoln" in his underworld dealings. Jimmy Fratianno, a gangster-turned-informer, said in his biography The Last Mafioso, that the now-imprisoned former Chicago boss Joe Aiuppa told him: "Sid is our man," adding that he has "been our man his whole life." In 1983 Joseph Hauser, a convicted insurance swindler, testified before a Senate labor investigation that Accardo had told him "on several occasions [that] he had sent Korshak to Los Angeles to represent the mob there."

Two years ago Korshak shed a little light on his fixer's role with Hilton. During the hotel's unsuccessful attempt to get a casino license in New Jersey, Chairman Barron Hilton announced that he was dropping Korshak's services because of the Division of Gaming Enforcement's concern about Korshak's underworld connections. The hotel had previously paid him $700,000 in fees.

Korshak fired off an angry response to the chairman that was later turned over to the state's gaming investigators: "I read with interest your disparaging remarks about me," he wrote. "When did you discover that I was associated with characters that shocked your most decent sensibilities?" Korshak added: "You will remember calling me in Las Vegas at six one morning while you were with [movie executives] Kirk Kerkorian and Frank Rothman to ask the unions involved not to strike you. As you well know, there was no fee involved."

Labor consultant Jack McCarthy is still in business even after taking on Rico Construction Co. of Long Island as a client in 1979. Facetiously named after the antiracketeering statute, Rico was an FBI front. In a series of secretly taped conversations, McCarthy agreed to get Rico non-union carpenters for a $5,000 bribe and a promise of future payments.

McCarthy had already served time for accepting kickbacks on Teamster pension fund loans and should have suspected that he was being set up. But he did not. Soon he lured Teddy Maritas, boss of the District Council of Carpenters, into the taped conversations. The FBI promptly arrested Maritas and tried him for working with gangsters to rig bids and shake down contractors. The jury was unable to reach a verdict, and Maritas disappeared before he could be retried. Authorities believe he was murdered. McCarthy pleaded guilty to extortion and went to prison again. He was freed in 1982, but is still under close watch. "We intend to limit history from repeating itself," says Ray Maria, deputy inspector general of the Labor Department.

In Chicago politics and organized crime have always been linked. The FBI has had Pat Marcy, a 1st Ward Democratic leader, under surveillance since the late 1960s. Former FBI agent Roemer told Senate investigators in 1983, "Marcy has been calling the shots of the mob as far as politics is concerned for many, many, many years. He was the conduit through which orders of the Outfit passed to those politicians and public officials who were under their control." And he still is.

the new union's leaders would dispense with a dissident, Avellino added: "and when we say go break this guy's balls ... they're there, seven o'clock in the morning to break the guy's balls."

Avellino went on to detail how profitable a union could be in overcharging for phantom garbage: "This is what he [Corallo] tells me. A strong union makes money for everybody, including the wise guys ... because the envelopes [of money] ... are bigger and better ... 2,000, 5,000, 10,000, 20,000, 30,000, 50,000 ... I can't even carry them."

Corallo did not start a Teamster local to rival the Gambino one. But he controls others, notably Teamster locals 295 and 851, whose members play a key role in the $4.2-billion-a-year air freight business at New York's Kennedy Airport. His union clout helped block the proposed $63-million merger in 1983 of Air Express International and CF Air Freight, a subsidiary of Consolidated Freightways. According to Air Express's labor contract, the company had to continue the existing Teamster pact, even if it merged. That was unacceptable to Consolidated. Corallo's men offered to abrogate the contract for $500,000 in cash. Both companies balked at the shakedown and abandoned the merger plan.

Corallo's extortion attempts were usually more successful. Six air freight companies operating at Kennedy—Air Express, Union Air Transport, Kamino Air Transport, Schenkers International Forwarders, Three Way Corp., and Hi's Airport Service—funneled more than $1.1 million to the Corallo mob between 1978 and 1985. FBI wiretaps on the home phone of Corallo's airport overseer revealed the payoffs. Paul Vario (No. 32) and three other Corallo lieutenants pleaded guilty.

IN MANY CITIES mobsters use Teamster connections to shake down legitimate companies. In Detroit, Vincent Meli (No. 41) captured the entire steel-hauling business with the connivance of crooked Teamster officials in Local 124. His trucking company, Trans-Steel, obtained such favorable contracts that it did not even pay drivers fringe benefits. Meli drove all his competitors out of business. "I know of no other industry in the area where organized crime has achieved such control," says Craig Woodhouse, an investigator for the Department of Labor.

Mafia entrepreneurship took a different tack in Scranton, Pennsylvania. There Eugene Boffa, an associate of the local Mafia boss Russell Bufalino (No. 12), organized what he called a "labor leasing" business. The President's Commission on Organized Crime reported that to get the new venture off the ground, Boffa gave "bribes and kickbacks" to "corrupt Teamsters," including President Jackie Presser. Boffa established 30 labor-leasing companies to provide truck drivers to such giants as Shell Oil Co., Continental Corp., Coca-Cola, American Cyanamid, Crown Zellerbach, and International Paper.

The labor-leasing scheme worked like this: The client "corporations would fire all of their drivers and Boffa would rehire them at a reduced wage," the President's Commission reported. In return, Boffa received fees ranging from 7% to 10% of the drivers' gross wages. Then he handed over 50% of his share to boss Bufalino.

The surest way to get ahead in the Mafia is to kill. That explains the sudden rise to prominence of John Gotti (No. 13). As a petty crook, Gotti had the humiliating habit of getting caught, usually as a result of sloppy bravado. Though he is only 46, he has served prison terms of one year for attempted burglary and four years for stealing truckloads of clothing at Kennedy Airport, and he is on trial for hijacking armored trucks. Law enforcement authorities say he arranged the execution last December of Gambino boss "Big Paul" Castellano and his bodyguard outside Sparks Steak House in Manhattan.

THE PRESS portrays Gotti as the new boss of the Gambino clan and the reincarnation of Al Capone. His custom-tailoring, his black Mercedes 450 SL, his wisecracks in court, even his carefully coiffed pompadour made him a sudden sensation. But his superstar status is more image than substance. He claims to be a distributor of phonograph records. His experience is really as a loan shark, hijacker, and hit man. He does not seem qualified to run the Gambino family's complex businesses, which range from meat and poultry sales to a garment industry trade association. Besides, if he is sentenced to the maximum 45-year prison term, his newly acquired and self-proclaimed control over the Gambino family would evaporate.

The President's Commission on Organized Crime reported that the Gambino meat and grocery operations are so vast that legitimate food producers feel compelled to deal with them. Paul Castellano, Gotti's victim, ran Dial Poultry Co., a large distribution company in Brooklyn, now managed by his sons Paul Jr. and Joseph. Big Paul's cousin Peter Castellana Sr. is listed as sales manager of Quarex Industries, another wholesale company with sales of more than $100 million.

Frank Perdue, who heads the famous $840-million-a-year chicken processing company, used Dial Poultry to distribute his chickens. Perdue's relationship with the Castellanos, as the President's Commission put it, shows that some legitimate businessmen turn to "organized crime connected companies" to gain a competitive edge.

Initially, Perdue told the President's Commission, he was reluctant to have anything to do with Dial because of Paul Castellano's notoriety as a Mafioso. But when Perdue saw Dial as a way of expanding his sales, he recalled, "I started saying to myself, 'Why shouldn't I have some of that business?' " As his sales to Dial increased, Perdue sought Big Paul's help in fighting a union-organizing campaign at his processing plant in Accomac, Virginia. Perdue explained: "I just thought, you know, they have long tentacles, shall we say, and I figured he may be able to help." By long tentacles, Perdue said that he meant

AN EQUAL OPPORTUNITY EMPLOYER

■ Organized crime in the U.S. is not a Mafia monopoly. Members of the Chinese Triad secret societies and Japanese Yakuza have acquired growing influence in Hawaii and on the West Coast, where their legal and illegal enterprises range from prostitution and heroin to commercial real estate. Vietnamese underworld gangs operate in California and Texas, and the so-called Israeli Mafia is based in Los Angeles. Even a Russian emigré gang works extortion and narcotics rings in New York City. And in September a jury convicted 11 members of a Taiwanese crime syndicate, United Bamboo, of racketeering and drug dealing in the same Manhattan courthouse where eight of the top 50 Mafia bosses are now on trial.

At least three other groups have become strong enough to strike deals with the Italian-American mob. Most powerful are Colombian cocaine and marijuana traffickers, who are shattering the widely held assumption of Mafia omnipotence.

For one thing, the Colombians' sources of supply, their cocaine-processing labs, and their armed strongholds in Latin America are beyond the Mafia's reach. For another, Colombian gunmen in the U.S. are known not only for shooting their targets, but for picking off the victims' relatives as well. Even Genovese and Bonanno hitters are afraid to challenge these wild men, preferring a policy of appeasement, and a cut of the profits for serving as their distributors.

Perhaps the biggest cocaine trafficker is Colombian Carlos Enrique Lehder Rivas, 38, a fugitive from the Drug Enforcement Administration who is also known as Joe Lehder. Arrested in Detroit in 1973 for smuggling stolen cars, Lehder was imprisoned for two years and then deported to Bogotá. Back home he got into the drug business, acquiring jungle plantations and processing labs. He also assembled a private army and a fleet of fast ships and planes, and built a well-guarded base for his smuggling armen struck a deal with Fidel Castro's officials to let drug-laden planes fly through Cuban air space unimpeded for two hours a day. Federal agents estimate that Lehder's cocaine sales in the U.S. range from 500 to 1,000 kilos a week. At a rock-bottom price of $6,000 per kilo, his annual revenues would come to between $160 million and $320 million.

U.S. agents investigating Lehder believe he is hooked on his own wares. He fancies himself a Marxist revolutionary called "Comandante Rambo" but runs his far-flung operations from the cockpit of a Learjet. He also owns a newspaper that publishes anti-U.S. diatribes. He pronounced death threats against U.S. diplomats in Colombia and the agents trying to close down his business on American soil.

Other crime groups, such as the Pagan Motorcycle Club and the Cuban "Corporation," have also reached accommodation with various Mafia families. The Pagan "bikers," who are Americans, work with the Philadelphia mob in drug trafficking and extortions, while the Corporation (estimated annual net profit: $45 million) operates numbers games in New York and New Jersey. The Cubans reportedly surrender a small percentage of their gross revenues to the Genoveses and Bonannos. But in Gambino territory the split goes the other way. To keep the peace, the

The Mafia's net income, the gross rev nues less such overhead costs as salari transportation, entertainment, and payof is conservatively estimated at $30 billion year by the President's commission. But t profits present a bit of a problem. Muc the money comes in $10 and $20 bills; n ing a big purchase with, say, hundred pounds of greenbacks could be incriminat Before this dirty money can be safely sp or pumped into legitimate businesses must be laundered.

One solution is to employ clandestine co riers to transport the cash to banks in the hamas, Switzerland, or Hong Kong. Bu easier way was the system used by Genn Angiulo (No. 34), the silver-haired un boss in Boston. Workers in Angiulo's N End headquarters merely stuffed the mo into brown grocery bags and walked th blocks to a branch of the First National B of Boston. They returned with cashi checks.

Even though Angiulo acquired an occ front estate in suburban Nahant an $320,000 yacht to go with it, his bucket gade of deposits drew no special attent The myriad transactions occurred despi federal regulation passed in 1970 that quired all banks to report cash receipts $10,000 or more. In 1981 the U.S. gov ment deployed agents to eavesdrop on giulo's operation. The inquiry resulte racketeering charges against Angiulo deep trouble for the Boston bank.

Angiulo's associates purchased cashier checks totaling $8.3 million between 197 and 1982, according to the federal investig tion. The bank failed to report 105 check bought for $1.8 million in cash, as well some $1.2 billion in foreign cash transfe unrelated to Angiulo. The bank plea guilty and was fined $500,000. Angiulo fined $120,000 and sent to prison for years. At his trial it was disclosed that FBI, using wiretaps, had overheard the lowing admissions:

"We buried 20 Irishmen to take town over," bragged Angiulo. "We bookmakers. We're selling marijuana. are illegal here, illegal there. Arsonists. are everything."

Corrupt Unions To Be the Target Of Justice Dept.

U.S. Will Seek to Oust Mobsters From Control

By PHILIP SHENON
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21 — Federal law-enforcement officials, encouraged by this week's guilty verdicts in the Mafia commission trial in New York, say they will broaden efforts against labor unions controlled by organized crime.

Over the next few years, they say, the Justice Department and the Federal Bureau of Investigation will attempt to take control away from corrupt labor leaders by replacing them with court-appointed trustees.

"We want to sever the connection between organized crime and labor," said one senior Justice Department official. "We're going after it."

Similar to Earlier Move

Officials said the efforts would resemble those made by the department earlier this year in New Jersey, where a trustee was named to replace the executive board of Local 560 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters. A Federal judge said the local was run by "mob-controlled gangsters" who had been linked to murder and other crimes.

According to Justice Department officials, the Government's victory in New York, where eight defendants were convicted Wednesday of operating a "commission" that ruled the Mafia throughout the United States, had opened several important avenues of investigation, including new inquiries into links between unions and organized crime.

Importance of Trial Cited

Prosecutors said the verdicts had encouraged union workers, business leaders and others victimized by organized crime to come forward with information.

"There's no way to overstate the importance of that trial," said Stephen S. Trott, the Associate Attorney General. "It used to be believed that you could never get to the top of organized crime. Now we've exploded that myth."

Mr. Trott would not say if prosecutors recently enlarged their efforts against corrupt unions.

But another Justice Department official, who asked not to be identified, acknowledged the broadened campaign and said it would focus on four large unions: the teamsters, the International Longshoremen's Association, the Hotel and Restaurant Employees and Bartenders International Union and the Laborers' International Union of North America.

In a report earlier this year, the President's Commission on Organized Crime identified the four as having "histories of control or influence by organized crime" and recommended efforts to place corrupt locals under court supervision. The unions have generally denied allegations of corruption.

The teamsters are known to be a particular concern to the Justice Department. The union's president, Jackie Presser, was indicted in May by a Federal grand jury on charges of embezzlement and racketeering in a purported scheme involving union employees who were paid even though they did no work. Mr. Presser pleaded not guilty.

Law-enforcement officials were reluctant to discuss details of their strategy against corrupt unions, saying they did not want to tip off individual labor leaders who might become targets in the investigations.

"Some of these guys are pretty dumb," said a Justice Department official involved in prosecuting organized crime. "They still talk on telephones. I think we'd be crazy to let them know what we're doing."

Threats and Reprisals

In the New Jersey case, a Federal judge, Harold A. Ackerman, imposed a trustee on Local 560 in Union City last June. He said evidence showed that the union leadership had intimidated the local's 8,000 members through murder, threats and illegal reprisals.

According to the judge, it was the first time elected union officials had been ousted and replaced by an outside trustee in a civil case. The local had been dominated by the Provenzano family for more than 25 years. A former president of the local, Anthony Provenzano, is serving a life term in prison for the 1961 murder of a union rival.

Last June Federal prosecutors in Manhattan asked a Federal judge there to name a trustee to take control of Local 6A of the Cement and Concrete Workers, contending that the union was dominated by the Colombo crime family. The request is pending.

The Federal racketeering law permits the Government to seek to replace a union's leadership when it is found to be corrupt.

There have been indications from the Justice Department in recent weeks that another important case is imminent against the teamsters, the nation's largest union, with about 1.7 million members.

Department officials would not confirm the reports, but a lawyer with close ties to the department said prosecutors might soon attempt to oust senior union officials through the racketeering statutes.

The Organized Crime Commission urged law-enforcement officials to consider such a move, describing the influence of organized crime in the union as "pervasive." According to the commission, the teamsters "have been firmly under the influence of organized crime since the 1950's.

The case against Mr. Presser is still pending, as is a separate case brought against an F.B.I. agent who purportedly lied about his relationship with the union leader. The agent, Robert Friedrick, was indicted in May on Federal charges of making false statements. He has pleaded not guilty.

Justice Department officials have said that Mr. Presser served for years as a Government informant, a charge the union leader has denied.

Law-enforcement officials stressed that the efforts against corrupt unions would be only one part of what they describe as a historic battle against organized crime.

Edward McDonald, a prosecutor with the Justice Department's organized crime strike force in Brooklyn, said in an interview that the verdict this week had damaged but certainly not ended the power of the Mafia. Like other prosecutors, he cautioned against overconfidence in the fight against organized crime families.

"What we're going to have to do is continue to make cases against the hierarchy of the major families in New York and throughout the United States," he said. "We're not making any claims that we've rooted it out once and for all."

Title:

Evidence Against Ex-FBI Agent Voided

Judge's Ruling Could Damage Prosecution of Teamsters Chief

By Mary Thornton
Washington Post Staff Writer

U.S. District Court Judge George H. Revercomb yesterday threw out evidence considered crucial to the perjury case against a former FBI agent who admitted lying last year about a scheme to prevent indictment of Teamsters President Jackie Presser.

Justice Department officials said that unless Revercomb's order is reversed, their case against Robert S. Friedrick is over. And they said the order "doesn't look good" for the case against Presser, who was indicted last May for allegedly siphoning more than $700,000 from the Teamsters and another union local in a payroll-padding operation using ghost employes.

In granting a suppression motion by Friedrick's attorneys, Revercomb threw out all the statements in which Friedrick incriminated himself. The judge said that when Friedrick corrected his earlier statements, federal prosecutors neglected to warn that they had changed their minds about promising him immunity from prosecution.

Revercomb said the prosecutors did not inform Friedrick clearly that he faced possible prosecution and that he had a right to have an attorney present and to remain silent to avoid incriminating himself.

The prosecutors testified that they did not believe they were legally required to explain the situation fully to Friedrick. They said they had not made a formal decision to prosecute him and were afraid he would give no further information if advised of his rights.

The judge denied three defense motions to dismiss the five-count indictment against Friedrick.

Through a spokesman, deputy associate attorney general James I.K. Knapp said, "We are disappointed, and we are considering an appeal" of the order. U.S. Attorney Joseph E. DiGenova said an appeal is "highly likely."

Defense lawyer William Beyer said, "I think we've won our case. As far as I know, the only evidence they have against Mr. Friedrick is based on his own statements."

Friedrick, a 13-year veteran in the Federal Bureau of Investigation who headed the organized-crime squad in the Cleveland office, told investigators in August and September 1985 that the FBI had authorized Presser's use of the ghost-employe scheme while Presser was working as an FBI informant.

The investigators were looking into the Justice Department's May 1985 decision to drop a recommended indictment against Presser because of revelations that his alleged crimes had been authorized by the FBI.

According to court documents and three days of testimony this week before Revercomb, Friedrick changed his story last January when he was ordered to Washington and interrogated again by prosecutors.

In those interviews, Friedrick said he had made up the story about the FBI authorization of the ghost-employe scheme. He said he decided to tell the truth after long discussions with his wife and minister because he "felt like dirt." He also said that he lied because he "got too close" to Presser while the two worked together and believed that the union leader was being treated badly.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Mark Biros, who is prosecuting the case, has argued that while Friedrick was given some immunity early in the probe, it never covered lying to the investigators.

But Beyer produced transcripts showing that during a crucial January interview prosecutors talked to Friedrick about the possibility of "starting over" before testifying to the grand jury investigating Presser. He said Friedrick believed he was being given a chance to correct his statements.

Beyer emphasized that Richard Rogers, a Justice Department lawyer and a former prosecutor in the case, had warned Friedrick "not to discuss this matter with anyone," leading him to believe he was not to seek an attorney.

The U.S. attorney in Cleveland, Patrick M. McLaughlin, testified for the defense Wednesday that Friedrick came to him last January for advice. "It was clear he was very concerned . . . very anxious . . . . He did not have an understanding of his present situation . . . . [But] he did not feel [the prosecutors] wanted him to talk to an attorney," McLaughlin said.

FBI Agent Thomas Kirk, a friend of Friedrick, said he advised him last fall to hire an attorney. He said Friedrick told him he didn't have the funds and believed he was not supposed to discuss the matter with anyone outside the FBI.

Freidrick, who sat impassively through the hearings, leaned over to Beyer after the ruling and said quietly, "Thanks."

Asked by reporters about his self-restraint, he smiled and said, "Every time I say something, I get into trouble."

4 charged with fraud in election of Presser

NEW YORK TIMES

NEW YORK — Anthony Salerno, convicted boss of the Genovese crime group, and three associates were charged yesterday with carrying out a fraudulent scheme to select Jackie Presser as head of the Teamsters union.

Milton Rockman of Beachwood, O., is among those charged.

The indictment, unsealed in New York, also charged the four with seeking to influence Presser's decisions concerning the union and its pension and welfare funds as part of "a pattern of racketeering activity."

Presser, president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters since 1983, was not named as a defendant.

The charge was added to a racketeering indictment against Salerno and 15 other defendants scheduled for trial Jan. 20 in U.S. District Court in Manhattan. The main racketeering charges each carry a maximum sentence of 20 years in prison.

Salerno was among eight defendants convicted last week of related charges of racketeering in operating a "commission" that ruled the Mafia in the United States.

The latest indictment charges that in 1983 the defendants "selected Jackie Presser as their candidate for interim general president of the Teamsters international."

Presser, a central figure in a 32-month federal investigation of union corruption, was indicted by a federal grand jury in Cleveland in May on charges of embezzlement and racketeering. He pleaded not guilty.

Presser has repeatedly denied wrongdoing. Calls to his lawyer, John Climaco, were not returned yesterday.

In yesterday's indictment the defendants were accused of having "influenced certain Teamster officials" to support selection of Presser by the union's General Executive Board to "fill the unexpired term of Roy L. Williams."

In the original indictment, the four were accused of helping elect Williams as president of the Teamsters in 1981. Williams was convicted in 1982 of trying to bribe Sen. Howard W. Cannon, D-Nev.

The latest indictment charges Rockman met with "the heads of organized crime families in Chicago and Cleveland to seek their approval of the selection of Jackie Presser" as head of the Teamsters. Rockman and another defendant, John Tronolone, went to New York to obtain Salerno's approval, the indictment charges.

The indictment said Salerno "then influenced Teamster officials from the New York metropolitan area and elsewhere to support the selection."

Another defendant, Vincent Cafaro, was charged with participating in the scheme.

Federal authorities identified Cafaro, 53, of the Bronx as a captain in the Genovese crime family; Tronolone, 75, of Miami Beach, as a member of the Cleveland crime family and close associate of the Genovese group, and Rockman, 73, as an associate of both families.

The superseding indictment, which includes several new charges of bid-rigging, in addition to the charge involving the selection of Presser, contains a total of 39 charges against 16 defendants.

The main defendant, Salerno, is 75 and lives in Rhinebeck, N.Y.

Teamsters Chief Presser Was Informant For the FBI, Justice Department Says

By GREGORY STRICHARCHUK
Staff Reporter of THE WALL STREET JOURNAL

Teamsters President Jackie Presser was an informant for the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Justice Department disclosed publicly for the first time.

Separately, the Teamster chief's lawyer, John R. Climaco, said in a filing in Cleveland federal court that Mr. Presser had a "relationship" with the bureau that began in the early 1970s and that government documents he is seeking will "establish that officials within the FBI have had continuous contact" with Mr. Presser.

Mr. Presser's lawyer also maintained in the filing that the Teamster leader had been authorized as far back as the early 1970s by FBI agents, the director of the bureau and the attorney general to pad the payroll of Teamster Local 507 with individuals who didn't perform any work for the local.

Jackie Presser

As reported, Mr. Presser, secretary-treasurer of Local 507, was indicted earlier this year by a federal grand jury in Cleveland on charges of racketeering, embezzlement and filing false union reports with the government as part of a scheme involving three so-called ghost employees—people who received salaries but did no work—on Local 507's payroll.

"Mr. Presser was an informant for the Federal Bureau of Investigation . . . ," Richard Rogers, a Justice Department lawyer testified yesterday in federal court in Washington, D.C.

Mr. Rogers's testimony came at a pretrial hearing for a former Federal Bureau of Investigation agent who was indicted earlier this year on charges of trying to shield Mr. Presser from indictment in the alleged payroll-padding scheme.

The indictments of Mr. Presser and Robert S. Friedrick, former supervisor of the FBI's organized-crime squad in Cleveland, and other Local 507 officials came nearly a year after Justice Department prosecutors dropped an investigation of Mr. Presser's role in the alleged payroll-padding scheme. Mr. Rogers testified that one other person indicted in the alleged scheme, Anthony Hughes, recording secretary of Local 507, also was an FBI informant.

Paul K. Minor, chief of the FBI's polygraph testing program, testified yesterday that Mr. Friedrick "told me he simply got too close to an informant and thought that Jackie Presser had been a very valuable FBI informant and that he had been treated wrongly and he resented it." Mr. Minor further testified that Mr. Friedrick told him he lied to try to deflect prosecution of Mr. Presser believing that the Teamster chief would be the only person indicted in the probe and he (Mr. Friedrick) "resented that."

Mr. Climaco in his filing maintained that both the Justice Department and the Labor Department, which had initiated the payroll-padding probe, "were aware of the relationship" between Messrs. Presser and Hughes and the FBI "for a lengthy period of time." He asserted that the current Cleveland proceedings were spawned partly because of "prosecutorial vindictiveness" and a "power play" between the FBI and Labor Department.

Help-Wanted Advertising Volume Gained in October

NEW YORK—Help-wanted advertising increased in October for the second consecutive month.

The Conference Board said its help-wanted advertising index rose to 141 in October, up six points from September's revised level of 135. The September figure was initially listed as 134. In August the October 1985 index was 140.

The index, which uses 1967 as a base of 100, measures the volume of classified advertising in 51 major newspapers.

Kenneth Goldstein, a Conference Board economist, said the latest figures reflect a labor market in which "conditions continue to show neither strong im-

Teamster Chief Was Informer, U.S. Aide Says

He Worked With F.B.I., Official Tells Hearing

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2 (AP) — A Justice Department official acknowledged for the first time today that Jackie Presser, president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, was an informer for the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Richard M. Rogers, deputy counsel to the Justice Department's Office of Professional Responsibility, testified in a Federal District Court hearing that both Mr. Presser and Anthony Hughes, recording secretary for Teamsters Local 507 in Cleveland, were informers for the bureau.

The disclosure was the latest in a complicated series of developments relating to Mr. Presser, who was indicted in May by a Federal grand jury in Cleveland on embezzlement and racketeering charges after a long and politically sensitive inquiry by the Justice Department.

Among the unusual twists in the Presser case was the indictment and dismissal of an F.B.I. agent who was accused of lying to Justice Department investigators when he said that bureau agents had approved improper payments to teamsters' union employees who did no work.

Effect of Disclosure Unclear

It was unclear whether Mr. Rogers' disclosure would damage the Justice Department's case against Mr. Presser. Mr. Rogers, in his testimony today, referred to the existence of some 10,000 F.B.I. documents in Presser case.

Allegations that Mr. Presser had a relationship with the bureau first circulated more than 18 months ago after his uncle, Allen Friedman, was convicted of taking part in the payroll scheme.

Mr. Friedman's conviction was set aside in 1985 amid reports that the bureau had authorized the payments he received. At the time, the Justice Department and the bureau refused to confirm or deny that they had authorized such a payroll scheme, or that he had worked for the bureau.

Mr. Presser's attorney, John Climaco, filed documents Monday in a Federal court in Cleveland saying the teamsters' union president had been authorized and encouraged by the Government to commit the acts that later led to his indictment.

But the documents filed by Mr. Climaco stopped short of saying Mr. Presser had been an F.B.I. informer. Mr. Presser, 60 years old, previously denied that he was a Government informer.

At the hearing today, no details were available on the nature of any information Mr. Presser might have given to the bureau, on whether he might have been paid for it, or on when he had been an informer.

Mr. Presser, who has been the leader of the teamsters' union's 1.6 million members since 1983, was indicted last May by a Federal grand jury in Cleveland on two counts of labor racketeering, one count of embezzlement and two counts of filing false reports with the Government.

The indictments involve what the Government asserts was a scheme in which $700,000 from Local 507, where Mr. Presser remains the secretary-treasurer and chief local officer, was paid to employees who did no work.

Indicted with Mr. Presser on the charges were Mr. Hughes and Harold Friedman, the president of Local 507 and a vice president of the international union. He is not related to Allen Friedman.

Robert S. Friedrick, the former F.B.I. agent, has been charged with five counts of lying under oath to Justice Department officials in 1985 about Mr. Presser's role in the reported payroll scheme.

It was during a hearing here today in connection with the indictment of Mr. Friedrick that Mr. Rogers testified that Mr. Presser and Mr. Hughes were informers for the bureau.

Mr. Friedrick was dismissed by the F.B.I. Director, William H. Webster, upon his indictment last May. His trial is scheduled to begin here Jan. 12. If convicted, he could face prison sentences of up to five years on each count.

During the hearing today, Mr. Friedrick's attorney, William D. Beyer of Cleveland, asked United States District Judge George H. Revercomb to dismiss the charges against Mr. Friedrick.

Mr. Beyer said Government restrictions on releasing documents and interviewing other F.B.I. agents in connection with the case hampered his ability to adequately represent his client.

Mr. Rogers, during questioning by Mr. Beyer, acknowledged that Mr. Beyer had been told he would be allowed to see only edited versions of some 10,000 F.B.I. documents in the Presser case while prosecutors were given the complete papers.

"What were the subject of those papers?" Mr. Beyer asked.

"The relationship between Presser and the F.B.I.," Mr. Rogers answered.

"And what was that relationship?" Mr. Beyer asked.

"He was an informant for the F.B.I.; as was Tony Hughes," Mr. Rogers replied.

Teamster Presser refuses FBI protection, new identity

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — The FBI, fearing for Teamsters Union President Jackie Presser's safety, has offered him protection under the federal witness program, but Presser has refused, the Los Angeles Times learned Friday.

Government sources said that the offer, which would have required Presser to drop from public sight and assume a new identity, was extended earlier this month after a Department of Justice attorney and an FBI polygraph operator testified in open court about Presser's role as an FBI informant.

John R. Climaco, Presser's attorney and general counsel of the Teamsters, refused to comment on the matter Friday. The FBI also would not comment.

PRESSER'S INFORMANT status was acknowledged at a Dec. 2 pretrial hearing for fired FBI agent Robert S. Friedrick, who faces charges of lying to federal investigators.

Paul Minor, an FBI polygraph expert, testified that Friedrick "told me he simply got too close to the informant, and that Jackie Presser had been a very valuable FBI informant (and now) was bring treated badly."

Justice Department attorney Richard M. Rogers testified that "Presser was an informant for the FBI."

Sources familiar with the matter said that the FBI has no information that Presser is in any immediate jeopardy from being named as an informant, but their concern was apparently heightened after the slayings of two organized crime figures while they were on trial.

LAST DEC. 16, Paul Castellano, a leader of the Gambino Mafia family, was gunned down in New York City. Castellano had been on trial with nine other reputed members of the Gambino organization in connection with a massive auto theft ring. Earlier this month, Gaetano Mazzara, on trial with 19 codefendants in connection with a billion-dollar Mafia heroin operation, was found shot to death.

Extending protection to Presser before his trial would be in line with Justice Department policy, an official said, noting that protection has been given to certain other defendants in similar circumstances. In the protection program, defendants who are convicted serve prison sentences under assumed names and in specially segregated units. Defendants who are acquitted or who complete their sentences may be set up in jobs under false identities in cities around the country.

Because Presser rejected the offer, the FBI did not discuss it with the U.S. Marshals Service, which runs the witness protection program, sources said.

There was no thought given to assigning federal agents to protect him while he continues as a public figure because it would be "too manpower intensive," a source explained.

Presser rejects FBI protection offer

LOS ANGELES TIMES

WASHINGTON — The FBI, fearing for Teamsters Union President Jackie Presser's life, has offered him protection under the federal witness program, but Presser has refused, government sources said yesterday.

The offer would have required Presser to drop from public sight and assume a new identity. It was made this month after a Justice Department lawyer and an FBI polygraph operator testified in open court about Presser's role as an FBI informant.

John R. Climaco, Presser's lawyer and general counsel of the Teamsters, declined comment yesterday.

The FBI also would not comment. It would not even acknowledge Presser's longtime service to the FBI.

"We won't confirm an informant status even if the alleged source confirms it," said William M. Baker, assistant FBI director for congressional and public affairs. "Disclosures made in court will have to stand on their own."

Presser's informant status was acknowledged at a Dec. 2 pretrial hearing for fired Cleveland FBI agent Robert S. Friedrick. Friedrick was indicted here for lying to federal investigators.

Friedrick had received information from Presser in organized crime investigations. He admitted trying to protect Presser from indictment in a Labor Department probe by telling officials that he had authorized Presser to put "ghost employees" on Local 507's payroll to help him solidify his position with organized crime figures.

Friedrick's statement derailed the planned prosecution of Presser. But Presser was later indicted for labor racketeering, embezzlement and filing false documents with the government after officials concluded there had been no authorization.

The case against Friedrick was virtually gutted at the pretrial hearing. A federal judge threw out all of the evidence associated with Friedrick's confession because the government had tricked him into believing he had immunity from prosecution.

Sources said the FBI has no information that Presser is in any immediate jeopardy. But, there were indications of a threat in early 1985 when FBI electronic surveillance picked up an argument between members of Chicago and New York Mafia organizations about whether to move against Presser because he might be an informant. The New York family sided with the Cleveland Mafia in opposing action against Presser, sources said.

Extending protection to Presser before his trial would be in line with Justice Department policy, an official said. He noted that protection has been given to certain other defendants in similar circumstances.

In the protection program, defendants who are convicted serve prison sentences under assumed names and in specially segregated units. Defendants who are acquitted or who complete their sentences may be set up in jobs under false identities.

A Bureau of Prisons spokesman said there are 380 protected witnesses now in federal prisons, and that the number is continually growing.
